71. You have, at short notice, called for a Department meeting to discuss a confidential matter and reach a decision on it. At the beginning of the meeting you remind the members that, once the meeting is over, they must never refer to the matter or discuss it with other people. So you say:

- A) I really had no choice but to call this meeting since issues we are going to deal with really cannot be postponed any longer.
- B) I'm sure it hasn't been hard for any of you to come to the meeting; as you all know, the matter under discussion is rather personal.
- C) First, I must thank you for coming to our routine weekly meeting: I must warn you that the main item we are going to talk about today may upset a few of you.
- D) I'm glad so many of you could make this meeting; let me point out first that the issue under discussion may turn out to be very controversial
- E) Sorry to disrupt your programmes by bringing you here now, and let me stress from the start that there must be no leakage about the meeting.

72. Given the present situation, you are in a dilemma as to how to invest your savings. You can't decide whether it would be more profitable to buy shares or to invest in a strong currency. You consult a close friend who is an economist and say:

- A) Since you are more informed about money matters than I am, I wish you'd advise me on whether to invest in shares or in a strong currency.
- B) I've been told that there's no point in investing either in shares or in a strong currency; do you agree?
- C) If you know anything about economics, please tell me whether shares look like being a good investment.
- D) I am very confused about how to invest my savings. Who do you think could give me some good advice?
- E) I have invested all my savings in shares, not in strong currency; as an expert, do you think I have made a wrong decision?

73. As an expert in international relations, a group of journalists have asked you to give your opinion on the strained relations between the United States and China over the recent spy plane crisis. You feel that it is too early to make a full assessment of the outcome of the crisis. So you say:

- A) This is an unfortunate event which seems likely to have long-term damaging effects on the relations between the two countries.
- B) It is clearly a very serious situation. However, it's surely better to wait a while before venturing to comment on the international impact of it.
- C) I think both countries should exercise discretion; and if they do so, the crisis will soon be resolved.
- D) As far as I am concerned, this spy crisis is being grossly exaggerated by both sides.

- E) If you ask me, both sides are equally to blame for the crisis which could prove a threat to world peace.

74. As a farmer you are experienced in animal husbandry and have a herd of healthy cattle. The herds in the neighbouring farms, however, have been hit by foot-and-mouth disease. Despite the stringent measures you have taken, you are worried that the disease may spread to your herd. So you say to your veterinary doctor:

- A) I'm very upset by the fact that my neighbours' herds have got foot-and-mouth disease. Shouldn't you have detected this earlier?
- B) In the neighbouring farms, it seems they have several cases of foot-and-mouth disease. I've taken every precaution against it, so I'm not worried.
- C) Do you know anything about this foot-and-mouth disease which I understand is troubling the cattle in neighbouring farms?
- D) Since I take good care of my cattle I don't think this foot-and-mouth disease among my neighbours' herds will affect me
- E) I'm obviously concerned about the spread of foot-and-mouth disease in the neighbourhood. Is there anything else that I can possibly do to protect my own cattle?

75. You are the defence lawyer in a case of a bank robbery. You believe that your client was not involved in it but merely happened to be in the area at the time of the robbery. This was the grounds for his arrest, and forms the basis for your defence. So you say to the court:

- A) The bank in question is in a deserted neighbourhood, so it is not likely that anyone saw what was happening.
- B) I cannot contest the accusation that my client was involved in the robbery but the part played by him was definitely minimal.
- C) The reasons for suspecting my client of the robbery are purely circumstantial: there is no reason to doubt his innocence.
- D) I suppose you naturally suspected my client, as he had already been involved in a bank robbery.
- E) There were several other people in the bank at the time. What were they doing?

76. Your company manager has recently been asking you to work overtime several times a week. At first you agreed fairly willingly but you regret that you ever agreed, as it has really overtired you. You wish to be excused from all overtime work. So you say to the manager:

- A) I don't mind doing some overtime once a week but I can't manage more.
- B) All this overtime work leaves me very exhausted; initially I didn't mind doing it, but now could you please let me off?
- C) I have always enjoyed doing the overtime as the work has proved very stimulating.
- D) I only agreed to do overtime as I needed the money.
- E) I think it's time we stopped all this overtime business, as it has turned out to be very boring: don't you agree?

77. Marlin : I've been reading about naval activities during World War I.

Colin : ____

Marlin : Quite a lot! Did you know that British submarines sank nearly 1,000 ships in European waters alone?

Colin : No I didn't. That's quite an impressive figure.

- A) Well, are you now an expert in these matters?
- B) Yes, I know that book; I'm not sure how reliable the information is.
- C) If you find it interesting pass it on to me when you've finished.
- D) That's a subject I don't know much about.
- E) Well, what have you learned?

78. Mavis: How are you getting on with that book? Gertrude Stein is supposed to be difficult to read.

Pat : Let's say her style is unusual and you do need to get used to it.

Mavis : ____

Pat: Oh certainly. Her ideas are really very interesting and stimulating.

- A) And how long does that take?
- B) I suppose all good writers have their own individual style.
- C) Well, in the end, is it worth all the effort?
- D) I don't think I'd enjoy her.
- E) Does this special style of hers serve any useful purpose?

79. Mother: Should I send my little son to his grandmother's house as his brother Richard has the mumps?

- E) How can I learn more about it?

81. Patrick: I see the controversy over the use of cameras to stop speeding continues.

Ben: ____

Patrick: Well, some people reckon that visible cameras are more effective, others that hidden ones are.

Ben: Well, whenever I have been caught it has been by hidden ones.

- A) I think we need them. There are more cars on the roads these days and more accidents.
- B) Something more than speed control is needed.
- C) Yes, and I expect it will go on doing so. Which side are you on?
- D) That's normal. Nobody wants them!
- E) I wasn't aware of it. What's happening?

82. Alison: What are you reading?

Brenda: An article on tulips. Apparently when a tulip is two-coloured, this is due to a virus disease.

Alison: ____

Brenda : So do I.

- A) Really? How interesting! But actually I prefer the single-coloured ones.
- B) How can they be sure of that?
- C) I find that hard to believe. They are always coming up with preposterous ideas!
- D) I suppose it could be. I've certainly noticed that they aren't as strong as the single-coloured ones.
- E) That's a shame! Because really they are so lovely! Don't you agree?

In the case of shallow tunnels or in urban areas it is often possible. by means of carefully sited boreholes, to gain an idea as to the nature of the ground and water conditions. Under high mountains boring becomes expensive so reliance has to be placed upon geological interpretations. As strata can vary so much, surprises are often met with and techniques sometimes have to change in a single tunnel. In the Severn railway tunnel (4 mls 628 yd long, completed in 1886) great quantities of water were unexpectedly encountered and are still being pumped out.

83. The writer explains that when a tunnel does not go deep underground, ____ .

- A) one can learn about the type of ground it is to pass through by means of strategically placed boreholes
- B) the type of strata it is to pass through is unimportant
- C) it may prove unsuitable in urban areas
- D) the geological nature of the terrain does not, in general, have to be taken into consideration
- E) the techniques used to excavate it vary very little

84. We understand from the passage that before any tunnel is opened ____ .

- A) an exact understanding of the nature of the rock strata around it must be gained
- B) samples of the ground through which it is to pass must always be taken
- C) it is desirable to get an idea of the nature of the ground that is being tunnelled
- D) the area surrounding it should be drained of any underground water
- E) the suitability of the site has to be test-blasted

85. It is pointed out in the passage that the geological interpretations made of the strata through which a tunnel is to go ____ .

- A) are based on samples of the ground taken from boreholes
- B) cannot detect underground waterways
- C) are particularly relevant in urban areas
- D) are not always reliable
- E) are especially useful if underground water is suspected

As with all revolutions, the causes of the American Revolution which separated the original thirteen American colonies from Great Britain were social, economic and political and so inextricably interwoven that it is difficult to appraise them. First there was the distance from Great Britain and the environment of a new country which, whether they willed it or not, had gradually over a period of 150 years turned Englishmen into Americans. The older stock was largely English but the bulk of them, as a contemporary historian commented. "knew little of the mother country, having only heard of her as a distant kingdom, the rulers of which had in the preceding century persecuted and banished their ancestors to the woods of America". With each generation and with each move westward old contacts were broken. Furthermore large groups of colonists had come from Germany, Ireland and other parts of Europe and had no ties with England and, in the case of the Irish, no affection.

86. The writer makes the point that it is very hard to ____ .

- A) assess the separate causes of the American Revolution because they are so complex
- B) justify the American Revolution historically
- C) relate the American Revolution to the economic circumstances of the time
- D) account for the political causes of the American Revolution
- E) explain the social implications of the American Revolution on Britain

87. According to the passage, by the time the American Revolution took place, ____ .

- A) generations of the colonists in America had dreamed of gaining their independence
- B) the non-British immigrants had demographically far exceeded the British ones
- C) many of the British colonists were still trying to maintain their ties with the mother country
- D) the colonists living in America felt they no longer had any ties with Britain
- E) the number of the Irish in America had more than doubled

88. The writer points out that, among the non-British colonists in America, it was the Irish who ____ .

- A) had suffered most at the hands of the British
- B) were the least friendly towards Britain
- C) united with the German colonists to oppose Britain
- D) were among the first ones to settle there
- E) felt they had been unjustly banished to these parts

Translation renders knowledge mobile. The task of the scientific translator, no less than the literary translator, has been to create new texts, to multiply sources into new languages, and thereby to produce new "originals". Over time, translation itself has built a great scientific library, ever more enriched, and accessible. Although we may think of scientific translation as literal, mechanical work, this has never been the case. The reasons for this are complex, but have much to do with the lack of exact one-to-one correspondence among languages. Translating science always involves interpretation, the remaking of an original. If it did not, machine translation would have long ago rendered the scientific translator extinct.

89. According to the passage scientific translation, just like literary translation, ____ .

- A) requires a kind of rewriting of the original text
- B) should avoid the temptation of trying to interpret the original text
- C) is becoming increasingly mechanised and making translators themselves redundant
- D) has actually played a very small part in the spread of knowledge
- E) is presently being carried out into fewer and fewer languages

90. The writer stresses that the job of a scientific translator ____ .

- A) requires more technical knowledge than linguistic
- B) is far easier than that of the translation of literary texts
- C) has been made much easier with the introduction of machine translation
- D) is actually far more creative than has generally been assumed
- E) goes back farther in history than does that of the literary translator

91. As the writer suggests, an important obstacle that a scientific translator faces, is that ____ .

- A) new scientific texts are growing more and more complex in content
- B) very few people are interested in the translations of scientific works
- C) the machine translation of scientific texts has reached a high level of efficiency
- D) the work is mechanical and tedious that it offers almost no satisfaction
- E) the exact translation of one language into another can almost never be achieved

The ideal of a family life shared by all in 19th century England survived into the early 20th century, until home life was seriously dislocated in 1914 by World War I, which was a war on the largest scale the world had ever known. But since the last decade of the 19th century new developments and inventions had been rapidly affecting the home life of an increasing number of people. Town and country were knit more closely together by easier railway travel, cheap and efficient postal services, the popularity of the bicycle, the development of the petrol engine and the cheap popular newspaper; such things as these helped to break down social formalities and to place women again on a more equal footing with men.

92. It is pointed out in the passage that, as a result of a variety of changes in the way of life in England at the turn of century, ____.

- A) travel by rail became the most popular form of transport
- B) living conditions in the country couldn't keep up with those in the towns
- C) the position of women in society improved significantly
- D) country people were for the first time able to benefit from postal services
- E) the urban people had the unique opportunity of exploring to countryside on their bicycles

93. According to the author, one of the damaging effects in England of World War I, was that ____.

- A) more and more people began to leave urban areas and move to the countryside
- B) the manufacturing industry experienced a severe recession
- C) technological progress was adversely affected
- D) the traditionally close family life was badly disrupted
- E) everybody began to take an interest in political and economic affairs

94. The author points out that World War I ____.

- A) helped to bring town life and country life closer together
- B) showed people how important family life was
- C) was of a greater magnitude than any previous war had been
- D) was an important factor in the break down of social formalities
- E) had been expected as far back as the last decade of the 19th century

95-97 soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Most people take it for granted prices will always rise and understandably so. A 60-year-old American has seen them go up by more than 1.000 % in his life time. Yet prolonged inflation is a comparatively recent phenomenon. Until about 60 years ago prices in general were as likely to fall as to rise. On the _____ of the First World War, for example, prices in Britain, over all, were almost exactly the same as they had been at the time of London in 1666. Now the world may be reverting to that earlier normality. The prices of many things have fallen over the past 12 months or so. Not only computers and video players, but a wide range of goods- from cars and clothes to coffee and petrol - are in many countries, cheaper than they were a year ago.

95. It is emphasized in the passage that, up to the last half century or so, _____ .

- A) a period of prolonged inflation was a rare occurrence
- B) prices were rigidly controlled to avoid inflation
- C) Britain was one of the few countries to suffer from inflation
- D) people were more disturbed by a fall in prices than by a rise in prices
- E) it was extremely unusual for prices either to rise or to fall

96. We understand from the passage that the experience of average Americans over the last 60 years or so, _____ .

- A) has made them one of the most economy-conscious nations in the world
- B) has taught them to expect continual price increases
- C) has impressed on them the need to produce more and more goods
- D) has encouraged them to cut down on expenditure
- E) has made them fear deflation more than inflation

97. The writer of this passage suggests that, economic trends, worldwide, _____ .

- A) can rarely be accurately predicted
- B) have been characterised by ever-increasing inflation
- C) have not been affected by a drop in prices in a few countries
- D) have been affected by the danger of deflation
- E) seem to be changing as the prices of many goods are falling

98-100 soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Water of doubtful purity for drinking can be rendered safe by boiling and then can be cooled in water bags or in earthenware containers, which must be protected from dust and flies when boiling is not possible, drinking water can in many areas be adequately sterilised by chlorination; one tablet of halazone is added to one litre of water and allowed to stand for 30 minutes. Water containing suspended matter should be filtered first. There is, however the danger of a particularly serious infectious disease in many regions of Africa, the Middle and Far East and South America. In these regions the water of rivers, lakes and canal may be infected, and the disease is acquired when the water comes in contact with the skin.

98. In this passage the writer points out that boiling _____ .

- A) is the only safe method of producing drinking water
- B) is commonly used in Africa and the less developed countries to purify water
- C) is a reliable method of making impure water safe to drink
- D) will purify water but must not continue for more than 30 minutes
- E) is one method of combating infectious diseases in third world countries

99. We learn from the passage that, when sterilisation of water is to be carried out by means of chlorination, _____ .

- A) It is important to make sure that the water is not affected
- B) it must be preceded by filtration
- C) great care must be taken that no dust be allowed to get into the water
- D) the best containers for the job are earthenware one
- E) the process should be followed by the boiling of the water

100. We understand from the passage that, in certain regions of the world, such as parts of Africa and Asia _____ .

- A) filtration is vital for the removal of suspended matter from the water
- B) river water may be so infected that boiling cannot purify it
- C) people are cautioned not to use canal water because it is always infected
- D) Halazone tablets are frequently used to sterilise infected water
- E) skin contact with infected water can cause the development of a highly infectious disease
